"Where is all the wool?" was a question asked by one of the trade today. An absolute shortage of wool available due to wet conditions has really impacted the opening of the first sale of this year ending with a good lift in the market indicator. A woollen blanket could be thrown across most prices to cover them as there is little difference in price between the very good to good styled wools. It was pleasing to see today some strong bidding on lambs wool that has been slow to receive any recognition this season.
